

To whom it may concern:

Santiago Pedrazzoli has studied with me for two years in Acting and Character Creation, during which he has significantly developed his skills, which were already good, his acting technique, and his ability to create, imagine, and play. He has achieved this thanks to his impeccable commitment to his craft, his love for this profession, and his constant willingness to learn. That's why I have been able to observe, both in his classwork and in shared practices, how his range and ability to adapt what he learned in class to a film set have increased.

His preparation has been impeccable, his reception of feedback attentive and intelligent, and his predisposition always filled with passion and hard work. If we add his generosity with colleagues and his reconciling and collaborative attitude, it leads me to foresee that he will be a great asset within the film crews that undoubtedly await him in the future.

Something I highly value in Santiago is his ambition to learn and improve. Therefore, he has complemented his training at the Instituto del Cine de Madrid with seminars, courses, and encounters with the best professionals in the Spanish scene. In addition to his thirst for knowledge, he possesses emotional intelligence that allows him to be aware of his achievements and limits, enabling him to overcome obstacles and choose what is most beneficial for his own progress. We have had many conversations about this. He has navigated through his learning process with his professional goals always in mind.

I predict a beautiful path and a long professional journey for Santi, and I absolutely recommend his participation in film, theater, television, and artistic creation projects in general.

I am delighted to provide more information about Santiago if you wish.

Sincerely,

Maria Morales
